Cherries have a long history in Chinese culture and are often associated with various positive attributes such as good luck, happiness, and prosperity. To the ever-growing group of health-conscious consumers in China, cherries are seen as a prime snack choice, being rich in antioxidants, vitamins, and minerals.

Chilean cherries, which are harvested during the Southern Hemisphere's summer, help fill the gap in the Chinese market by providing fresh cherries during China's winter months. These factors, coupled with the mature and stable supply chain established, helped Chilean cherries gain a strong foothold in the Chinese market.

Chilean cherry exports hit a high of 413,981 metric tons during the 2023/2024 season. The export growth estimation for this season is projected at 59% and reaching approximately 658,000 metric tons, of which China will continue as the main destination.

Cherries do not have a long shelf life and are prone to damage if there are delays in transport, hence the time sensitive nature raises the need for fast and reliable transport, which is key to ensure that the fruit arrives in the best possible condition.

To meet this need, ONE has implemented a temporary change in port rotation and faster sailing speed, thus demonstrating our commitment to the perishable produce industry and flexibility to adapt to new challenges by providing innovative solutions. Recognizing the increased Cold Treatment requirements this season, we have also stepped up on our efforts to ensure that ONE continues to provide a best-in-class Cold Treatment service to our valued customers.
